Who responds to First Aid and Incidents?

Each day we have key leadership Team members on site dedicated to responding to incidents should they occur, including a First Aid Officer. Our Team members are First Aid trained as per national standards, with advanced resuscitation training also. Team members are also trained across a variety of scenarios that could occur in the Park, including major first aid incidents, alongside park evacuation, fire training, wildlife awareness etc. We have a generously stocked First Aid room on-site, including a defibrillator and epi-pens, so we are prepared for any situation that may arise. We have a number of policies and procedures in place for in-park incidents, in brief; once the incident has been brought to our attention, they are assessed by the First Aid Officer, who will then alert the Duty Manager for the appropriate course of action. For First Aid incidents involving Guests who require immediate treatment, such as broken bones or unconsciousness – an ambulance would be called. More general incidents such as bumps and scraps are taken care of by our First Aid team.

In the event of calling an ambulance – who do you use?

In the event of requiring an ambulance, 000 is called and the Ambulance services dispatched is at their discretion – in WA 000 calls are looked after by St John Ambulance. We don't call hospitals directly – only 000.

The nearest hospital emergency rooms are Joondalup Hospital being approximately 20 minutes away, and Midland Hospital which is approximately 27 minutes away. Response time for an ambulance is generally dependent on what priority the incident is determined by the call centre when 000 is called, and what ambulances are close by.

In the event of an incident requiring non-urgent medical treatment, medical centers are located in Bullsbrook, Ellenbrook, Banksia Grove and Wanneroo.

Do you have Public Liability Insurance and an Emergency Response Plan?
